13 ORDER ON MOTIONS TO REMAND
14 AND DISMISS

15 Re: Dkt. Nos. 11, 21
16

17 Plaintiff Monette Rockymore alleges that she was mistreated by her employer and 18 managers. She makes many claims, including discrimination and related claims on the basis of 19 race, gender, and disability. She moves to remand this case to state court; the defendants move to 20 dismiss. The motion to remand is denied: the defendants have adequately shown that diversity 21 jurisdiction is proper at this posture. The motion to dismiss is granted in part and denied in part.
It is denied on the claims for race and gender discrimination, retaliation, failure to provide a reasonable accommodation, and negligent supervision. It is granted with leave to amend on the claims for disability discrimination, hostile work environment, breach of contract, and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

22 BACKGROUND

23 Rockymore is a citizen of California. Complaint (“Compl.”) [Dkt. No. 1 at ECF 18–37] ¶

24 1. She is a woman and identifies herself as “Pacific Islander/Asian.” Id. ¶ 13.a. The citizenship

1 of the Entity Defendants¹ and Individual Defendants² is a subject of dispute and is discussed 2 below. Rockymore alleges that the Entity Defendants “directly and indirectly” employed her in 3 San Ramon, California, as a laboratory manager. Id. ¶¶ 5, 9, 11. Since they hired her in July 4 2018, she had “cervical lymphadenopathy,” which she calls a “viral infection that causes severe 5 liver and kidney inflammation.” Id. ¶ 13.b. This condition, she says, “required her to have 6 frequent doctor visits” that she informed the defendants about. Id. It also required her to “take 7 protected medical leave.” Id.

8 In November 2019, defendant Dionne hired defendant O’Neale as a regional manager to 9 whom Rockymore reported. Id. ¶ 15.a. Rockymore alleges that she “immediately felt 10 discriminated [against] and harassed” by O’Neale. Id. She claims that he “disregarded” her 11 advice. Id. At one point, he approached Rockymore and her team and “sarcastic[ally]” said, “[i]s 12 there anything you guys want to brag about?” Id. Rockymore reported this to Dionne. Id. In 13 February 2020, on a work trip, Dionne and another employee (who is not a defendant) told 14 Rockymore that “she was being written up for” coming “into the office in the middle of the night 15 to complete an urgent request from a client in a timely manner.” Id. ¶ 15.b. Rockymore alleges 16 that doing so was “normal practice,” that another employee had done the same thing without being 17 written up, and that she was “shocked.” Id.

18 In March 2020, O’Neale dismissed an employee that Rockymore supervised without her 19 knowledge and said it was part of a “reduction in workforce.” Id. ¶ 15.c. Rockymore complained 20 to human resources but never heard back. Id. She claims that “the majority of male and non-21 Asian” managers at other labs “had access to subordinates to complete” their work while she “was 22 the only [one] affected by the ‘reduction in workforce.’” Id. She also complained to human 23 resources that she received less support than male and non-Asian employees but there was no 24 result. Id. Rockymore’s “workload became extremely high” but could not fill three vacancies in 25

26 ¹ The Entity Defendants are Eurofins, Eurofins VRL, Inc. (“Eurofins VRL”), Eurofins Denver 27 Corporate (“Eurofins Denver”), Eurofins Pre-Transplant Testing (“Eurofins Pre-Transplant”), Eurofins NSC US (“Eurofins NSC”), Eurofins DPT San Ramon (“Eurofins DPT”).

28 ² The Individual Defendants are Brendan O’Neale, Sara Dionne, and Rohini Ratnam.

1 her lab. Id. She asked O’Neale and human resources to hire them, but she was not granted 2 permission. Id.

3 In September 2020, Rockymore developed a “high fever” and was told by her doctor not to go
4 into work due to concerns about COVID-19. Id. ¶ 15.d. Rockymore then developed 5 “inflammation to her liver and kidney” that “require[ed] treatment from a viral and infectious 6 disease expert.” Id. She was placed on medical leave through September 30, 2020. Id. During 7 this leave, O’Neale and Dionne “continued to email her requesting tasks to be completed for work
8 related [sic] projects.” Id. Rockymore responded by asking Dionne to “request help from others.”
9 Id.

10 On September 18, 2020, O’Neale and Ratnam called Rockymore to terminate her. Id. ¶ 11 16. She “was shocked” and “felt sick to her stomach.” Id. She alleges that she had “just launched 12 a successful project” and had never been “informed of any performance issues.” Id.

13 Rockymore filed this suit in California state court on December 6, 2021, and the Entity 14 Defendants removed it to this court in January 2022. Dkt. No. 1. Later that month, the defendants 15 moved to dismiss, Rockymore moved to remand the case in February 2022, and I set a hearing on 16 both motions for April 6.

17 LEGAL STANDARD

18 I. MOTION TO REMAND

19 Generally, a case can be removed from state to federal court only when the federal court 20 would have had original jurisdiction over it. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a). The defendant has the burden 21 of establishing federal subject matter jurisdiction. See Washington v. Chimei Innolux Corp., 659
22 F.3d 842, 847 (9th Cir. 2011). Removability is “generally determined as of the time of the petition 23 for removal.” Local Union 598, Plumbers & Pipefitters Industry Journeymen & Apprentices
24 Training Fund v. J.A. Jones Constr. Co., 846 F.2d 1213, 1215 (9th Cir. 1988).

25 Under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a)(1), federal diversity jurisdiction exists when each plaintiff is a 26 citizen of a different state from each defendant and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000.
27 Natural persons are the citizens of the state in which they are domiciled—that is, the state in which 28 they reside with intent to remain permanently. See Kanter v. Warner-Lambert Co., 265 F.3d 853,

1 857 (9th Cir. 2001). In assessing individuals' citizenship, courts consider factors including 2 "current residence, voting registration and voting practices, location of personal and real property, 3 location of brokerage and bank accounts, location of spouse and family, membership in unions 4 and other organizations, place of employment or business, driver's license and automobile 5 registration, and payment of taxes." Lew v. Moss, 797 F.2d 747, 750 (9th Cir. 1986).
6 Corporations are, with several exceptions, citizens of the states in which they are incorporated and 7 maintain their principal place of business. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1).

8 Generally, "[i]f removal of a civil action is sought on the basis of the jurisdiction conferred 9 by section 1332(a), the sum demanded in good faith in the initial pleading shall be deemed to be 10 the amount in controversy." 28 U.S.C. § 1446(c)(2). But, "when a defendant seeks federal-court 11 adjudication, the defendant's amount-in-controversy allegation should be accepted when not 12 contested by the plaintiff or questioned by the court." Dart Cherokee Basin Operating Co., LLC
13 v. Owens, 574 U.S. 81, 87 (2014). "Where the complaint does not specify the amount of damages 14 sought, the removing defendant must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the amount in 15 controversy requirement has been met." Abrego v. The Dow Chem. Co., 443 F.3d 676, 683 (9th 16 Cir. 2006). And if the plaintiff does contest the notice of removal's allegation, "removal is proper 17 on the basis of an amount in controversy asserted by the defendant if the district court finds, by the 18 preponderance of the evidence, that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional 19 threshold." Dart, 574 U.S. at 88 (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 1446(c)(2)(b) (internal quotation marks and 20 alterations omitted)).

21 II. MOTION TO DISMISS

22 Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), a district court must dismiss a complaint 23 if it fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to 24 dismiss, the plaintiff must allege "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its 25 face." See Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). A claim is facially plausible 26 when the plaintiff pleads facts that "allow the court to draw the reasonable inference that the 27 defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) 28 (citation omitted). There must be "more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted

1 unlawfully.” Id. While courts do not require “heightened fact pleading of specifics,” a plaintiff
2 must allege facts sufficient to “raise a right to relief above the speculative level.” See Twombly, 3 550 U.S. at 555, 570.

4 In deciding whether the plaintiff has stated a claim upon which relief can be granted, the 5 Court accepts the plaintiff’s allegations as true and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the 6 plaintiff. See Usher v. City of Los Angeles, 828 F.2d 556, 561 (9th Cir. 1987). However, the court 7 is not required to accept as true “allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of 8 fact, or unreasonable inferences.” See In re Gilead Scis. Sec. Litig., 536 F.3d 1049, 1055 (9th Cir.
9 2008).

10 If the court dismisses the complaint, it “should grant leave to amend even if no request to 11 amend the pleading was made, unless it determines that the pleading could not possibly be cured 12 by the allegation of other facts.” See Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2000). In 13 making this determination, the court should consider factors such as “the presence or absence of 14 undue delay, bad faith, dilatory motive, repeated failure to cure deficiencies by previous 15 amendments, undue prejudice to the opposing party and futility of the proposed amendment.” See 16 Moore v. Kayport Package Express, 885 F.2d 531, 538 (9th Cir. 1989).

17 DISCUSSION

18 I. MOTION TO REMAND

19 Rockymore argues that the defendants have failed to show complete diversity of 20 citizenship and that the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000. See generally Motion to Remand 21 (“Remand Mot.”) [Dkt. No. 21]. For the reasons that follow, the defendants have met their 22 burdens at this stage.

23 A. Complete Diversity

24 As noted, all defendants must have different citizenship than Rockymore to maintain this 25 suit. See Kanter, 265 F.3d at 857. The parties agree that Rockymore is a citizen of California for 26 jurisdictional purposes. See, e.g., Remand Mot. 1 (“Plaintiff is a citizen of California.”); Notice of 27 Removal (“Not.”) [Dkt. No. 1] ¶ 11. Their dispute is over the citizenship of the defendants.
28

1 i. Entity Defendants

2 For diversity purposes “a corporation shall be deemed to be a citizen of every State and 3 foreign state by which it has been incorporated and of the State or foreign state where it has its 4 principal place of business.” 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c)(1). The Entity Defendants have introduced 5 evidence that they are all incorporated in states other than California, see Not. ¶¶12(a)–(b), (d), 6 and Rockymore does not dispute that. The parties’ dispute is whether the corporate defendants’ 7 principal places of business are in California or not.

8 For purposes of the diversity jurisdiction statute, a corporation’s principal place of business 9 is its “nerve center”; that is, “the place where a corporation’s officers direct, control, and 10 coordinate the corporation’s activities.” Hertz Corp. v. Friend, 559 U.S. 77, 92–93 (2010). That 11 will “normally be the place where the corporation maintains its headquarters—provided that the 12 headquarters is the actual center of direction, control, and coordination.” Id.

13 The defendants have met their burden to show that none of the Entity Defendants 14 maintains its principal place of business in California. The Notice of Removal states that Eurofins 15 NCS has “its principal place of business is in Leola, Pennsylvania as it performs the vast majority 16 of its executive and administrative functions at its corporate headquarters in that location, which is 17 also the home office of its Corporate Secretary.” Not. ¶ 12(b). The defendants submitted no 18 sufficient corroborating evidence with their notice of removal, which would have required remand.
19 See Ganesan v. GMAC Mortg., LLC, No. C 11-0046 SBA, 2011 WL 1496099, at *2 (N.D. Cal.
20 Apr. 20, 2011) (“Defendants’ bare allegation in its Notice of Removal that Virginia is MERS’ 21 principal place of business is not evidence.”). But they have included a sworn declaration with 22 their opposition brief that Eurofins NCS maintains its “headquarters in Pennsylvania” and that all 23 of its “executive officers . . . are located in Pennsylvania.” Dkt. No. 24-1 ¶ 4.³ And their Notice 24 of Removal states that Eurofins DPT’s “principal place of business is in Centennial, Colorado as it 25 performs the vast majority of its executive and administrative functions at its corporate 26 headquarters in that location.” Not. ¶ 12(a). They have filed a sworn declaration from a human 27

28 ³ Rockymore does not make an argument that this type of submission is improper or that the evidence must have accompanied the notice of removal, so I do not comment on that matter.

1 resources manager supporting that assertion. See Declaration of Dolci Morgan [Dkt. No. 1-1] ¶ 6.
2 Unless there are contrary indications of where these entities’ principal places of business were,
3 this evidence is sufficient to show that these corporations’ nerve centers are not in California.

4 To resist this, Rockymore first argues that I should employ the “substantial predominance” 5 test to determine where the principal place of business was. See Mot. 10. For a time, courts were 6 split on the proper test—two of the contenders were the “nerve center” and “substantial 7 predominance” tests. See, e.g., Montrose Chem. Corp. of California v. Am. Motorists Ins. Co., 8 117 F.3d 1128, 1134 (9th Cir. 1997). But in Hertz, the Supreme Court granted review to decide 9 that question and, in no uncertain terms, chose the nerve center test that I apply above. See Hertz, 10 559 U.S. at 80 (“We seek here to resolve different interpretations that the Circuits have given this 11 phrase.”); id. at 92 (discussing various tests); id at 93 (selecting the nerve center test).

12 Rockymore also attempts to rely on the citizenship of several business divisions of the 13 companies. See Remand Mot. 8–14. But the defendants have shown—and Rockymore has no 14 evidence to dispute—that these entities are simply unincorporated divisions of the other entities 15 (not, for instance, subsidiaries that are themselves incorporated). See Not. ¶ 12(d). In this Circuit, 16 a “division of a corporation does not possess the formal separateness upon which the general rule 17 is based, and thus is not an independent entity for jurisdictional purposes.” Breitman v. May Co.
18 California, 37 F.3d 562, 564 (9th Cir. 1994) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

19 ii. Individual Defendants

20 The defendants have also adequately alleged that the Individual Defendants are not citizens 21 of California. The Notice of Removal alleges that O’Neale’s and Dionne’s residential addresses 22 are in Colorado and that they work at Eurofins DPT’s corporate headquarters in Colorado. Not. ¶ 23 12(c)(i)–(ii). Though Ratnam no longer works at Eurofins, her residential address was likewise 24 listed as Colorado and she worked at Eurofins EPT’s Colorado headquarters until October 2020.
25 Id. ¶ 12(c)(iii). Her 2020 W2 form was sent (presumably in 2021) to that same address and 26 Eurofins has not received a change-of-address form. Id. This is sufficient to make out a prima 27 facie case of these individuals’ (non-California) citizenship. See, e.g., Fjelstad v. Vitamin Shoppe 28 Indus. LLC, No. 220CV07323ODWAFMX, 2021 WL 364638, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2021).

1 Rockymore never took issue with the individual defendants' citizenship in her motion. In 2 her reply, for the first time, she did so. Reply ISO Remand Mot. ("Remand Reply") [Dkt. No. 27]
3 5–6. Her tactic is not well-taken because it deprived the defendants of the opportunity to fairly 4 respond. But because this issue is jurisdictional, I must address it. Rockymore's argument is 5 unpersuasive. She argues only that the defendants have shown these individuals' residence, not 6 their citizenship, which are separate. Id. She is correct that citizenship is determined by residence 7 and intent to remain, not just residence alone. See Kanter, 265 F.3d at 857. But that these 8 individuals lived and worked in Colorado is sufficient evidence of their citizenship to meet at least 9 a prima facie burden; Rockymore has introduced no contrary evidence (though she may find it in 10 discovery). Cf. Lee v. BMW of N. Am., LLC, No. SACV1901722JVSADSX, 2019 WL 6838911, 11 at *2 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 16, 2019) (holding that residence alone is prima facie evidence of 12 citizenship). As a result, citizenship is adequately established for present purposes.

13 B. Amount in Controversy

14 The defendants have also shown that more than $75,000 is in controversy. Because no 15 amount is pleaded and Rockymore challenges their assertion, the defendants must show the 16 amount by a preponderance of the evidence. Dart, 574 U.S. at 88. Among other things, 17 Rockymore seeks lost wages. The defendants calculate based on her salary at the time of 18 termination that those wages would equal more than $260,000 at present (let alone at time of trial).
19 See Opposition to the Remand Mot. [Dkt. No. 24] 10. Though Rockymore argues about other 20 parts of their calculation, she never disputes this one. See Remand Reply 6–7. The defendants 21 have, therefore, met their burden.

22 II. MOTION TO DISMISS

23 The defendants move to dismiss all of Rockymore's claims for failure to state a claim. See 24 generally Motion to Dismiss ("Mot.") [Dkt. No. 11]. The motion is granted in part with leave to 25 amend and denied in part.

26 A. Discrimination

27 The defendants move to dismiss Rockymore's claim for discrimination on the basis of 28 race, gender, and disability, which is only against the Entity Defendants. Mot. 13–14; Compl. ¶¶

1 22–28. The motion is denied to the extent the claim is based on race or gender discrimination; it is 2 granted with leave to amend to the extent it is based on disability discrimination.

3 It is unlawful under California’s Fair Unemployment and Housing Act (“FEHA”) for 4 an employer, because of the race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical 5 disability, mental disability, medical condition, genetic information, marital status, sex, 6 gender, gender identity, gender expression, age, sexual orientation, or military and veteran 7 status of any person, to refuse to hire or employ the person or to refuse to select the person 8 for a training program leading to employment, or to bar or to discharge the person from employment or from a training program leading to employment, or to discriminate against the person in compensation or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment.

9 Cal. Gov’t Code § 12940(a). The California Supreme Court has explained that while “[t]he 10 specific elements of a prima facie case” of FEHA discrimination “may vary depending on the 11 particular facts,” the plaintiff generally “must provide evidence that (1) he was a member of a 12 protected class, (2) . . . was performing competently in the position he held, (3) he suffered an 13 adverse employment action, such as termination, demotion, or denial of an available job, and (4) 14 some other circumstance suggests discriminatory motive.” Guz v. Bechtel Nat. Inc., 24 Cal. 4th 15 317, 355 (2000) (citation omitted).

16 I begin with Rockymore’s allegations of race and sex discrimination, which are adequately 17 pleaded. There is no dispute that being a woman and being of Asian descent are protected classes.
18 See Cal. Gov’t Code § 12940(a); Compl. ¶ 13.a. Rockymore has also adequately pleaded that she 19 was “competently performing” her job: immediately before her termination, she had “launched a 20 successful project” and she had never been informed of any “performance issues” other than the 21 one reprimand that post-dated O’Neale’s arrival. Id. ¶ 15.d. And she suffered an adverse 22 employment action when she was terminated. See Guz, 24 Cal. 4th at 355 (explaining that 23 termination is an adverse employment action).

24 The parties’ dispute on this issue focuses on the last element: whether there is some 25 “circumstance suggest[ing] discriminatory motive.” Id. Though Rockymore’s allegations are far 26 from robust, I conclude she has adequately pleaded that this type of circumstance exists. She 27 alleges that, as soon as O’Neale was hired, she began to be treated differently. Compl. ¶¶ 15.a–b.
28 Several months into his tenure, he dismissed one of Rockymore’s employees without telling her or

1 consulting with her beforehand. Id. ¶ 15.c. According to her, similarly situated male managers 2 and managers who were not Asian had no similar terminations. Id. These allegations are 3 sufficient at this stage to create a reasonable inference that O’Neale acted discriminatorily, 4 including in the termination. See Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co., 358 F.3d 599, 603 (9th Cir.
5 2004) (holding that plaintiffs can meet their burden by showing that “similarly situated individuals 6 outside [their] protected class were treated more favorably” than they); *see also Rashdan v.
7 Geissberger*, 764 F.3d 1179, 1183 (9th Cir. 2014) (“Evidence of discriminatory motive can be 8 direct or indirect.”).

9 Reinforcing this conclusion, it is reasonable to infer from the Complaint that the 10 termination was pretextual. Rockymore pleads that she had never been confronted with any 11 performance issues aside from the February 2020 write-up (which occurred after O’Neale started 12 and is alleged to be for something employees uncontroversially did) and yet was terminated after 13 taking just a few days off for medical leave on the advice of a doctor during a pandemic. Id. ¶¶ 14 15.d., 16; see France v. Johnson, 795 F.3d 1170, 1175 (9th Cir. 2015), as amended on reh’g (Oct.
15 14, 2015) (holding that an employee can demonstrate pretext “by showing that the employer’s 16 proffered explanation is unworthy of credence because it is internally inconsistent or otherwise not 17 believable”). In short, the claim survives to the extent it is predicated on race- or gender-based 18 discrimination.

19 That is not true for Rockymore’s allegations of discrimination on the basis of disability.
20 The putative disability is Rockymore’s cervical lymphadenopathy and the illness she developed in 21 September 2020, which I take to be a manifestation of the lymphadenopathy based on its 22 symptoms (and the parties’ positions). But there is no allegation in the Complaint that would 23 permit a reasonable inference that any adverse employment action was taken on the basis of either 24 of these. Rockymore’s brief, similarly, focuses entirely on showing that her disabilities are 25 cognizable under FEHA, it draws no plausible connection between them and any adverse 26 employment action. There is no allegation about discriminatory statements about disability nor is 27 there (as there is with the race- and gender-based claims) any indication that similarly situated 28 employees without disabilities were treated differently. Accordingly, the claim is dismissed with 1 leave to amend to the extent it is predicated on disability discrimination.

2 B. Hostile Work Environment Harassment

3 The defendants move to dismiss the harassment claim, which is brought against all 4 defendants. See Mot. 14–16; Compl. ¶¶ 29–36. I agree that the claim is not adequately pleaded; it 5 is dismissed with leave to amend.

6 “FEHA prohibits harassment of an employee.” Lawler v. Montblanc N. Am., LLC, 704
7 F.3d 1235, 1244 (9th Cir. 2013); see also Cal. Gov’t Code § 12940(j). Under FEHA, a plaintiff 8 must demonstrate that “(1) she is a member of a protected group; (2) she was subjected to 9 harassment because she belonged to this group; and (3) the alleged harassment was so severe that 10 it created a hostile work environment.” Lawler, 704 F.3d at 1244. “Harassment cannot be 11 occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial; rather the plaintiff must show a concerted pattern of 12 harassment of a repeated, routine or a generalized nature.” Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car Sys., Inc., 13 21 Cal. 4th 121, 131 (1999) (internal alterations and citations omitted).

14 As a general matter, actions are not FEHA harassment if they are mere “commonly 15 necessary personnel management actions.” Lawler, 704 F.3d at 1244; Janken v. GM Hughes 16 Elecs., 46 Cal. App. 4th 55, 65, 80 (1996). Such actions are those “of a type necessary to carry out 17 the duties of business and personnel management.” Janken, 46 Cal. App. 4th at 65. They usually 18 include things like “hiring and firing, job or project assignments, office or work station 19 assignments, promotion or demotion, performance evaluations, the provision of support, the 20 assignment or non-assignment of supervisory functions, deciding who will and who will not attend 21 meetings, [and] deciding who will be laid off.” Id. at 64–65. Harassment, on the other hand, 22 “consists of actions outside the scope of job duties which are not of a type necessary to business 23 and personnel management.” Lawler, 704 F.3d at 1245. This does not mean that employers can 24 act discriminatorily and cloak their actions in the garb of the management exception; instead, 25 “[t]hese actions may retrospectively be found discriminatory if based on improper motives, but in 26 that event the remedies provided by the FEHA are those for discrimination, not harassment.”
27 Janken, 46 Cal. App. 4th at 65. In addition to discrimination liability, the California Supreme 28 Court has held that the managerial acts doctrine has another limitation: “some official employment

1 actions done in furtherance of a supervisor’s managerial role can also have a secondary effect of 2 communicating a hostile message.” Roby v. McKesson Corp., 47 Cal. 4th 686, 709 (2009), as 3 modified (Feb. 10, 2010). But, to establish this sort of liability, the actions must “establish a 4 widespread pattern of bias.” Id.

5 Rockymore’s allegations fail to state a claim for FEHA harassment. Almost everything 6 she references in the complaint are “commonly necessary personnel actions”—namely, her 7 termination, her supervisors requiring her to carry out tasks while sick, the meeting at which she 8 was admonished, and the refusals to hire more employees for her. They are not actionable as 9 harassment unless they fall into Roby’s exception. See Lawler, 704 F.3d at 1245; Janken, 46 Cal.
10 App. 4th at 65. They do not. She has not adequately pleaded that there was a “widespread pattern 11 of bias” in these actions that had “a secondary effect of communicating a hostile message” 12 sufficiently severe to alter the terms and conditions of employment. Roby, 47 Cal. 4th at 709.
13 Indeed, in the curt portion of her brief discussing Roby, Rockymore only regurgitates the basic 14 legal principle without engaging at all with her pleadings or explaining why it is met. See 15 Opposition to the Mot. (“Oppo.”) [Dkt. No. 19] 11.

16 The only non-personnel-management act alleged in the complaint is O’Neale’s “sarcastic” 17 comment to Rockymore and her team with the gist that they had no good news to report. But that 18 single comment (which is not facially discriminatory) was “isolated” and relatively “trivial” rather 19 than severe, “concerted,” or “routine.” Aguilar, 21 Cal. 4th at 131. Courts have found allegations 20 significantly worse than this—and those more facially discriminatory—to not be harassment. See, 21 e.g. Brennan v. Townsend & O’Leary Enterprises, Inc., 199 Cal. App. 4th 1336, 1353–58 (2011) 22 (rejecting as gender-based harassment an email calling the plaintiff a “big-titted, mindless one” 23 sent between coworkers, a male employee asking women to sit on his lap while dressed as Santa 24 Clause, an employee wearing a “veil . . . with a plastic penis attached” in a staff meeting, and a 25 supervisor asking questions about the plaintiff’s sex life).

26 Accordingly, the harassment claim is dismissed with leave to amend.

27 C. Retaliation

28 The government moves to dismiss the FEHA retaliation claim, which is against the Entity

1 Defendants. See Mot. 16–17; Compl. ¶¶ 37–43. The claim is actionable on one of the alleged 2 “protected activities” that Rockymore puts forward.

3 Under FEHA, it is unlawful for an employer to “discharge, expel, or otherwise 4 discriminate against any person because the person has opposed any practices forbidden under [the 5 statute] or because the person has filed a complaint, testified, or assisted in any proceeding under 6 [the statute].” Cal. Gov’t Code § 12940(h). To “establish a prima facie case of retaliation under 7 the FEHA, a plaintiff must show (1) he or she engaged in a ‘protected activity,’ (2) the employer 8 subjected the employee to an adverse employment action, and (3) a causal link existed between the 9 protected activity and the employer’s action.” Yanowitz v. L’Oreal USA, Inc., 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 10 1042 (2005). “Protected activity,” in turn, “can take many forms.” Id. In general, it is likely to be 11 an employee’s opposition to unlawful activities, complaints about unlawful activities, or refusal to 12 carry out unlawful activities. See id. at 1042–43. It not only means “conduct that ultimately is 13 determined to be unlawful[]” under FEHA but “also when the employee opposes conduct that the 14 employee reasonably and in good faith believes to be discriminatory.” Id. at 1043.

15 The basis of the retaliation claim is somewhat unclear from the Complaint, which just lists 16 the elements of the violation in conclusory terms, without linking them to pleaded facts. See 17 Compl. ¶¶ 37–43. In her brief, Rockymore points to two instances of protected activity. The first 18 she describes as follows:

19 Plaintiff alleges that on or around September 2020, she suffered a disabling illness that 20 prevented her ability to work and required her to take medical [sic]. Plaintiff informed her 21 supervisor, O’Neil [sic], of her condition. In response to O’Neale’ [sic] and Dionne’s 22 requests Plaintiff must complete tasks for work related projects. Consequently, Plaintiff replied by requesting help from others while she was on leave. Thus, her request for help is a clear opposition.

23 Oppo. 12 (citations omitted). Second, she points to her complaints about O’Neale’s behavior to 24 Dionne and human resources. Id.

25 The first of these is not a “protected activity” under FEHA as it is currently pleaded. All 26 that Rockymore states is that she asked Dionne to request help from others while she was on 27 medical leave. Compl. ¶ 15.d. That is not fairly understood to be opposition to any unlawful 28 activity or a complaint about it. See Yanowitz, 36 Cal. 4th at 1042–43. There is no plausible link

1 drawn between, for instance, disability discrimination and this request to Dionne to have others 2 carry out tasks. While Rockymore is correct that she was “not required to use legal terms or 3 buzzwords when opposing discrimination,” there is not even an oblique indication in this 4 allegation “when read in [its] totality,” that Rockymore was “oppos[ing] discrimination.” Id. at 5 1047. Even Rockymore’s best cases involved complaints about the allegedly wrongful activity.
6 See, e.g., Castro-Ramirez v. Dependable Highway Express, Inc., 2 Cal. App. 5th 1028, 1048 7 (2016) (finding a plausible claim when the employee complained about a change in hours after 8 previously telling the employer that he needed to care for his son with a disability).

9 The second of these, however, is plausibly a protected activity. Rockymore alleges that, 10 after O’Neale dismissed her employee, she complained to human resources. Compl. ¶ 15.c.
11 Indeed, she explicitly alleges that she complained to human resources that she received less 12 support than employees who were male or not Asian. Id. (“Rockymore believed this was not 13 ordinary because the majority of male and non-Asian managers at other labs had access to 14 subordinates to complete benchwork, whereas she was the only [one] affected by the ‘reduction in 15 workforce.’ Rockymore believes she was not given the same support as the majority of male and 16 non-Asian employees, to which she again raised complaints to Human Resources.”). That is, as 17 pleaded, a straightforward complaint about allegedly unlawful conduct. See, e.g., Yanowitz, 36 18 Cal. 4th at 1042–43; Castro-Ramirez, 2 Cal. App. 5th at 1048.

19 The defendants counter that Rockymore’s pleading about this complaint is not detailed 20 enough. See Mot. 17. While it is true that she does not provide much specificity, she need not do 21 more at this stage because she has drawn a plausible link between O’Neale’s alleged 22 discrimination and her complaint to human resources about it. She is not under a heightened 23 pleading standard. The defendants also argue that “the lapse in time between her alleged reports 24 in November 2019 and March 2020 and the September 2020 termination of Plaintiff’s 25 employment preclude any inference of retaliatory motive.” Id. That will be for the factfinder.
26 While delay may weaken Rockymore’s case as a factual matter, I cannot hold as a matter of law 27 that, if six months passes from a complaint to a termination, the employer gets a free pass on 28 motive. The defendants’ only proffered authority, Serlin v. Alexander Dawson Sch., LLC, 656 F.

1 App'x 853 (9th Cir. 2016), does not compel a different conclusion. To start, the case is not 2 binding. The defendants also mischaracterize it. According to them, it held that there can be “no 3 causal connection inferred when less than three months passed between the complaint and adverse 4 action.” Mot. 17. But all the panel said there was that a three-month period between the 5 complaint and the action was not enough alone to establish but-for causation without other 6 evidence on those facts. Serlin, 656 F. App'x at 856. It did not hold or imply that such a gap 7 defeats retaliation claims as a matter of law.

8 D. Disability Claims

9 The defendants move to dismiss Rockymore's claims for failure to provide a reasonable 10 accommodation and failure to engage with the interactive process, which are against the Entity 11 Defendants. Mot. 17–18; Compl. ¶¶ 44–59. Their motion is denied.

12 The defendants' only challenge to these claims is that Rockymore has not alleged a 13 qualifying disability. See Mot. 17–18. Both claims require a qualifying disability. See Cuiellette 14 v. City of Los Angeles, 194 Cal. App. 4th 757, 766 (2011) (failure to accommodate); Scotch v. Art 15 Inst. of California, 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1009–10 (2009) (failure to engage in the interactive 16 process). As noted above, I take the disability at issue to be the cervical lymphadenopathy and its 17 manifestation in the September 2020 illness. See supra Section II.B. Consequently, only alleged 18 “physical disabilities” are at issue. Under FEHA, a “physical disability” includes (but is not 19 limited to) “[h]aving any physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or 20 anatomical loss that does both of the following: (A) Affects one or more of the following body 21 systems: neurological, immunological, musculoskeletal, special sense organs, respiratory, 22 including speech organs, cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genitourinary, hemic and 23 lymphatic, skin, and endocrine. (B) Limits a major life activity.” Cal. Gov't Code § 12926(m)(1).

24 The defendants argue that Rockymore's descriptions of her purported disability are 25 conclusory, fail to demonstrate that she meets the legal test, and that her “alleged symptoms—26 ‘inflammation’ and ‘high fever’—are temporary and fleeting and therefore do not qualify as a 27 disability under FEHA’s definition.” Mot. 18. They also argue that “Plaintiff alleges that she 28 informed O’Neale of ‘her fever’ but nothing else” and this “isolated comment” would not put the 1 defendants on notice of the disability. Id.

2 I disagree. Rockymore alleges that she had previously informed the defendants about 3 doctor's appointments for the lymphadenopathy, see Compl. ¶ 13.b., so they would plausibly have 4 known about it. The disease (apparently) manifested in liver and kidney inflammation and fever 5 in September 2020, and she was placed on medical leave, which the defendants would have 6 known. See id. ¶ 15.d. Accordingly, it appears that her disease affected body systems and limited 7 at least the major life activity of work. See Cal. Gov't Code § 12926(m)(1); id. ¶
8 12926(m)(1)(B)(iii) (stating that "major life activities" includes "working"). This is unlike the 9 defendants' case on this issue, which held that an employer would not have known of the 10 disability because the form that the plaintiff relied on for this communication stated "only that 11 plaintiff was unable to work on four work days . . . due to an unspecified condition, and that 12 plaintiff was hospitalized for three days." Avila v. Cont'l Airlines, Inc., 165 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 13 1249 (2008), as modified on denial of reh'g (Aug. 28, 2008). The court held that, consequently, 14 the employer would not have known he had a qualifying disability. Id. Here, as explained, the 15 allegations are that the employer was aware.

16 Because this is the defendants' only challenge to these claims, I do not address the 17 remaining elements or other potential issues.

18 E. Failure to Prevent

19 Both parties agree that, for present purposes, the claim for failure to prevent discrimination 20 and harassment rises or falls with the substantive discrimination and harassment claims. See Mot.
21 19; Oppo. 15.

22 F. Breach of Contract

23 Rockymore alleges that she and the defendants agreed (expressly and impliedly) that she 24 would be terminated only for good cause. Compl. ¶¶ 68–74. The defendants move to dismiss the 25 breach of express and implied contract claims on the same grounds. Mot. 19–20.

26 In California, there is a statutory presumption that employment is at will. Cal. Lab. Code § 27 2922; Guz, 24 Cal. 4th at 335. That presumption can be overcome if the employer and employee 28 provide otherwise by contract. See Guz, 24 Cal. 4th at 335–36. The classic contractual alternative

1 is “an agreement that the employee will be terminated only for ‘good cause.’” Id. at 336. This 2 “contractual understanding need not be express, but may be implied in fact, arising from the 3 parties’ conduct evidencing their actual mutual intent to create such enforceable limitations.” Id.
4 Under California law, “a contract implied in fact consists of obligations arising from a mutual 5 agreement and intent to promise where the agreement and promise have not been expressed in 6 words.” Retired Employees Assn. of Orange Cty., Inc. v. Cty. of Orange, 52 Cal. 4th 1171, 1178 7 (2011) (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Cal. Civ. Code § 1621.

8 Rockymore’s express and implied contract claims are not adequately pleaded. The only 9 allegation about the existence of this alleged good-cause contract is the conclusory assertion that, 10 at some point, the defendants’ agents entered into a vague “oral agreement” or gave “oral 11 assurances” based on unspecified consideration in unspecified circumstances. Compl. ¶¶ 60, 73.
12 These pleadings essentially parrot the legal requirements of the claim and are insufficient. See 13 Gilead, 536 F.3d at 1055. Rockymore has leave to amend to plead the factual allegations 14 underlying this alleged contract so that the pleading is plausible.⁴

15 G. Negligent Hiring, Supervision, and Retention

16 The defendants move to dismiss Rockymore’s claim for negligent hiring, supervision, and 17 retention. Mot. 20. I reject their particular argument for dismissal.

18 In California, “[a]n employer can be liable to a third person for negligently hiring, 19 supervising, or retaining an unfit employee.” Alexander v. Cnty. Hosp. of Long Beach, 46 Cal.
20 App. 5th 238, 264 (2020) (internal quotation marks omitted). A plaintiff must show: “(1) a legal 21 duty to use reasonable care, (2) breach of that duty, and (3) proximate cause between the breach 22 and (4) the plaintiff’s injury.” Mendoza v. City of Los Angeles, 66 Cal. App. 4th 1333, 1339 23 (1998). This liability “is based upon the facts that the employer knew or should have known that 24 hiring the employee created a particular risk or hazard and that particular harm materializes.” Doe

26 ⁴ The defendants assert that the claim cannot survive because Rockymore was an at-will 27 employee. See Mot. 20. First, that is just an assertion in a brief, not a pleaded allegation or matter 28 subject to judicial notice, so it cannot be considered. Second, that is the very merits question to be answered by litigating this claim—whether Rockymore was at-will or could be fired only for good-cause.

v. Cap. Cities, 50 Cal. App. 4th 1038, 1054 (1996). To establish liability for negligent supervision, “a plaintiff must show that a person in a supervisorial position over the actor had prior knowledge of the actor’s propensity to do the bad act.” Z.V. v. Cty. of Riverside, 238 Cal. App. 4th 889, 902 (2015).

The defendants first argue that this claim is derivative of the discrimination, harassment, and retaliation claims. See Mot. 20. It is true that the facts underlying them are the same. But the defendants present no authority for the view that they are derivative and the ultimate legal questions are distinct: In discrimination, harassment, and retaliation claims, the question is whether the actor takes actions that meet the legal requirements for each violation. In this claim, the question is whether the employer knew or should have known of a particular risk from the employee and was negligent in the face of it.

The defendants argue that the claim must independently fail because Rockymore has not identified “who it is that Defendants knew or should have known created a particular risk or hazard.” Id. I disagree: the Complaint is clear that O’Neale is the employee who allegedly harmed Rockymore (which Rockymore confirms in her brief, see Oppo. 16–17).

Again, because these are the defendants’ only challenges to the claim, I do not address any other potential issues with it.

H. Wrongful Termination

The parties agree or appear to implicitly admit that the claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy is derivative of the discrimination, harassment, and retaliation claims. See Mot. 20 (so stating); Oppo. 17 (stating that the violation of public policy would be the discrimination).

I. Whistleblower Retaliation

The defendants move to dismiss the claim for whistleblower retaliation, which is brought against the Entity Defendants. Mot. 20–22; Compl. ¶¶ 84–90. Under Section 1102.5 of the Labor Code, as relevant to these facts, an employer cannot “retaliate against an employee for disclosing information, or because the employer believes that the employee disclosed or may disclose information . . . to a person with authority over the employee or another employee who has the

1 authority to investigate, discover, or correct the violation or noncompliance . . . if the employee 2 has reasonable cause to believe that the information discloses a violation of state or federal 3 statute.” Cal. Lab. Code § 1102.5(b).

4 The defendants make the same argument on this claim as they did on the retaliation claim: 5 that Rockymore has not adequately pleaded how she engaged in protected activity. See supra 6 Section II.C. But, for the reasons explained above, Rockymore has adequately pleaded that she 7 informed human resources about O’Neale’s allegedly discriminatory behavior, which is plausibly 8 actionable. See id.

9 J. IIED

10 The defendants move to dismiss the claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress 11 (“IIED”), which is against all defendants. Mot. 22–24; Compl. ¶¶ 91–95. “To state a cause of 12 action for intentional infliction of emotional distress a plaintiff must show: (1) outrageous conduct 13 by the defendant; (2) the defendant’s intention of causing or reckless disregard of the probability 14 of causing emotional distress; (3) the plaintiff’s suffering severe or extreme emotional distress; 15 and (4) actual and proximate causation of the emotional distress by the defendant’s outrageous 16 conduct.” Vasquez v. Franklin Mgmt. Real Est. Fund, Inc., 222 Cal. App. 4th 819, 832 (2013)
17 (internal quotation marks and alteration omitted). In this context, “outrageous conduct” means 18 conduct that is “so extreme as to exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized 19 community.” Hughes v. Pair, 46 Cal. 4th 1035, 1051 (2009). It is not sufficient that the conduct 20 be “mere insults, indignities, threats, annoyances, petty oppressions, or other trivialities.” Lawler, 21 704 F.3d at 1245. Just as with a FEHA harassment claim, IIED claims cannot be premised on 22 mere managerial actions unless there is something about it that elevates it to being independently 23 actionable. Id.; see, e.g., Cordova v. Target Corp., No. 2:16-cv-04809-SVW-AJW, 2016 U.S.
24 Dist. LEXIS 114995, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 26, 2016) (finding a plausible IIED claim when a 25 supervisor used “racially charged statements” and “made several other disparaging comments 26 towards him based on national origin, ancestry, age and parental-status”).

27 i. Preemption

28 The defendants first argue that the IIED claim is preempted by the workers’ compensation

1 exclusivity doctrine. Mot. 22–23. I disagree.

2 In general, “[p]hysical and emotional injuries sustained in the course of employment are 3 preempted by the workers’ compensation scheme and generally will not support an independent 4 cause of action.” Yau v. Santa Margarita Ford, Inc., 229 Cal. App. 4th 144, 161 (2014). But the 5 exclusive remedy of workers’ compensation applies to misconduct when it is “normal part of the 6 employment relationship, such as demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, and frictions 7 in negotiations as to grievances.” Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Prot. Dist., 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160 (1987).
8 That is, it does not preempt claims for acts that “exceed[] the risks inherent in the employment 9 relationship.” Livitsanos v. Superior Ct., 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754 (1992).

10 Because Rockymore’s IIED claim is predicated on discrimination, it is not barred by 11 California’s workers’ compensation exclusivity rule. As several California Court of Appeals 12 panels have held, “[d]iscrimination in employment is not a normal incident of employment” and, 13 consequently, not barred by the rule. Accardi v. Superior Ct., 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 347 (1993), 14 as modified on denial of reh’g (Aug. 20, 1993); see also Fretland v. Cty. of Humboldt, 69 Cal.
15 App. 4th 1478, 1492 (1999); Jones v. Los Angeles Cnty. Coll. Dist., 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 809
16 (1988). Discrimination is neither a “normal part of the employment relationship” nor is it a risk 17 “inherent” in that relationship. Cole, 43 Cal. 3d at 160; Livitsanos, 2 Cal. 4th at 754. The 18 statutory duty not to discriminate is a duty independent of the employment agreement or 19 relationship. As a result, I agree with the many federal district courts that have held or suggested 20 that California’s workers’ compensation exclusivity doctrine does not bar IIED claims predicated 21 on unlawful discrimination. See Brooks v. Corecivic of Tennessee LLC, No. 20CV0994 DMS 22 (JLB), 2020 WL 5294614, at *6 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 4, 2020) (collecting cases); Vanderhule v.
23 Amerisource Bergen Drug Corp., No. SACV162104JVSJCGX, 2017 WL 168911, at *4 (C.D.
24 Cal. Jan. 17, 2017); Barsell v. Urb. Outfitters, Inc., No. CV0902604MMMRZX, 2009 WL
25 1916495, at *4 (C.D. Cal. July 1, 2009); see also Fernandez v. PSC Indus. Outsourcing LP, No.
26 5:17-CV-00444-EJD, 2017 WL 3129208, at *3 (N.D. Cal. July 24, 2017) (holding that the law 27 does not clearly establish such claims are preempted); Macias v. Levy Premium Foodservices Ltd.
28 P’ship, No. 214CV09220SVWPLA, 2015 WL 12747900, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 12, 2015) (same);

1 Charles v. ADT Sec. Servs., No. CV 09-5025 PSG AJWX, 2009 WL 5184454, at *3 (C.D. Cal.
2 Dec. 21, 2009) (same).

3 The defendants' counterargument relies on two cases, but neither requires a different 4 outcome. In the first, the California Supreme Court addressed the scope of the workers' 5 compensation exclusivity doctrine as applied to IIED claims. See Miklosy v. Regents of Univ. of 6 California, 44 Cal. 4th 876, 902 (2008). There, it addressed retaliation for alleged 7 whistleblowing, not discrimination. See id. at 883. The court held that even though such 8 retaliation was malicious, it was ultimately still a "normal part" of the employment relationship.
9 Id. at 902. And though it thought the exception for conduct that exceeds the risks inherent in 10 employment may have applied "at first blush," it relied on a past case to hold—without much 11 explanation—that was not so. Id. (citing Shoemaker v. Myers, 52 Cal. 3d 1, 25 (1990)). The 12 second case relied exclusively on Miklosy and held, again, that a whistleblowing claim was 13 preempted. Yau, 229 Cal. App. 4th at 162. Neither case addressed the sui generis situation of 14 discrimination. And federal district courts after both cases have still held claims predicated on 15 discrimination not preempted. See, e.g., Vanderhule, 2017 WL 168911, at *4. It appears that the 16 defendants are largely latching onto Yau's statement that misconduct that can be characterized as 17 "harassment" is not actionable, but Yau was discussing harassment due to whistleblowing, not 18 discriminatory harassment. Yau, 229 Cal. App. 4th at 162.

19 ii. Adequacy of Pleading

20 The defendants also argue that Rockymore has failed to state a claim for relief. I agree.
21 For the same reasons as the harassment claim is not actionable, this claim fails. See supra Section 22 II.B. Most of the actions here are managerial and not actionable on this basis even if 23 discriminatory. Lawler, 704 F.3d at 1245. The only one that arguably is not managerial is 24 O'Neale's comment about the team having nothing to report which, though seemingly rude, does 25 not approach being "so extreme as to exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized 26 community." Hughes, 46 Cal. 4th at 1051. Again, courts have found significantly more offensive 27 comments not actionable than this lone, relatively mild one. See, e.g., Schneider v. TRW, Inc., 938 28 F.2d 986, 993 (9th Cir. 1991) (finding no IIED where a "supervisor screamed and yelled in the

1 process of criticizing her performance, threatened to throw her out of the department and made 2 gestures she interpreted as threatening"). Nor is this a case in which the comments themselves are 3 alleged to be discriminatory. See, e.g., Cordova, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 114995, at *5. The claim 4 is dismissed with leave to amend.

5 CONCLUSION

6 The motion to dismiss is DENIED on claim one to the extent it alleges race and gender 7 discrimination; claims three, four, five, nine, and eleven; and claims six and ten to the extent the 8 underlying claims survive. The motion to dismiss is GRANTED WITH LEAVE TO AMEND on 9 claim one to the extent it alleges disability discrimination; claims two, seven, eight, and twelve; 10 and claims six and ten to the extent the underlying claims are dismissed. An amended complaint 11 shall be filed within 20 days.
